16:15-17:00: BEST PRACTICES SESSIONS AND INTERACTIVE DISCUSSION ON “EXTERNAL STAKEHOLDER ENGAGEMENT ON THE CODE” BY MEDICAL DEVICE ASSOCIATIONS

Description: Industry’s collective work to ensure strong code governance, code alignment with best practices, and higher rates of member company adherence are each vital steps that should continue to progress. However, these steps alone would be insufficient. Codes of ethics, both at the association and individual enterprise level, should also be well understood by external stakeholders across the health system. This includes relevant government agencies, healthcare professionals and providers, and patients, among others. In this session, Diane Biagianti will offer specific strategies for industry associations across the Americas on how they can strengthen engagement on their codes of ethics with external stakeholders. This session will also cover the “non-member dilemma” and strategies to engage non-member companies on your association’s code.

- What more can be done to draw greater interest by governments and healthcare professionals to
Would your organization like to nominate specific government or healthcare professional bodies to invite to the next APEC Business Ethics for SMEs Forum?

Biography of Mr. Patrick Kirwan:

Kirwan is the Director of the Trade Promotion Coordinating Committee Secretariat at the U.S. Department of Commerce. In this capacity, he coordinates a network of 20 government agencies to improve federal trade promotion and finance programs to increase U.S. exports. He has focused specifically on developing commercial strategies for key markets and improving federal/state cooperation on export promotion. Kirwan also serves as U.S. delegate to the APEC SME Working Group. Prior to his current role, Kirwan has served as Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Domestic Operations, where he oversaw the operations of the 105 export assistance offices of the Department of Commerce. He has also spent two years in the White House at the Domestic Policy Council working on a variety of trade-related issues. As part of the Office of the President, Kirwan participated in the development of a number of strategic trade initiatives in areas such as electronic commerce, international standards setting, trade finance, and Asia policy.

16:15-16:45: INPUT SESSION ON MEASURING THE POSITIVE IMPACT OF ETHICAL BUSINESS PRACTICES IN THE MEDICAL DEVICE SECTOR

Description: Patrick Kirwan also works closely with Ms. Tricia Van Orden (Overseer) to ensure the Business Ethics for APEC SMEs Initiative remains at the forefront of pursuing high-standard ethical business practices for the benefit of all actors in our economies. For the past several years, there has been a call for this Initiative to support research that would measure the positive impact of ethical business practices in the medical device sector. Possible areas of focus for this research could include macroeconomic benefits to APEC economies, microeconomic benefits to APEC SMEs, health system benefits to APEC patients and consumers, and innovation benefits to APEC growth and competitiveness. This short input session will ask interested delegates to offer thoughts on the following questions:

- Do you support heightened efforts by this Initiative to research the positive impact?
- If so, what are your preferred areas of focus and would you recommend a research partner institution within your economy?

16:45-17:00: SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS AND PREVIEW OF THE PLENARY SESSION

Description: Katie Nunner will overview a recorded list of recommendations and action items provided by the session participants and inquire whether any adjustments are necessary. The recorded list will then be submitted to the Overseer. She will then provide a brief overview of what delegates should expect for the plenary session on Tuesday, 10 September, including arrival instructions and where to find your seats. Katie will also remind delegates to be in the Sheraton lobby at 18:15 this evening for shuttle transfer to the Welcome Reception.
